

We, the Association of Part-Time Undergraduate Students (APUS), stand in solidarity with the Canadian Union of Postal Workers (CUPW) and its members at Canada Post. Canada Post employees are currently fighting for fair wages, paid sick days, comprehensive benefits, safe working conditions, and expansion of their services to better meet the needs of our communities.

We echo the demands of postal workers for fair wages and safe working conditions and encourage our members to support. Here are three ways you can support:

1. Send a message to Canada Post CEO Doug Ettinger expressing your support for CUPW in negotiations.
2. Join a picket line to show your support
3. Use CUPW's posters to show your support.
4. Learn more about CUPW's proposals for new and expanded postal services through their Delivering Community Power campaign.

Postal workers play a critical role in keeping our communities connected. Ensuring that Canada Post remains publicly-owned, well-resourced and sufficiently extensive to meet the needs of our communities - while providing good jobs for their workers - is vital for our communities.

The struggles of workers and students are deeply intertwined, and as a student union we remain firmly in solidarity with postal workers. We know that when students and workers are united we will never be defeated. #StudentsandWorkersUnited #FairWagesNow
